Otoño 2006

*Láska je láska
malý princ a květina
ruže je ruže*

escrito con un árbol de tilo

A decorative frame with a black outline and white fill, featuring ornate scrollwork at the top and bottom. The frame is surrounded by scattered autumn leaves in shades of red, orange, and yellow, along with small brown acorns. The background is a light gray gradient.

Como ofrenda de gibberish, el primer contacto con la geografía checa encontró un cálido amigo sin edad. Su leñosa personalidad mostró que en la vida del Teatro Negro de Praga todo es posible y más ligero. Contemplados por árboles otoñales, estos poemas se tejieron sin fronteras, desde las alas de las abejas y las aletas de los peces de mares y cielos nocturnos de acuarios sin sal.

Amalgamar láska (amor en checo) y amor (láska španělsky) en Láskamor, alimentó el viaje de estas palabras. El Principito ya no estaba y Láska je láska (el amor es el amor) aún tenía que llegar. Entonces malý princ a květina (el principito le da una flor) y sugiere ruže je ruže (la rosa es la rosa) desde la pared del túnel, al ritmo haikú.

Para algunos, el amor puede sostenernos como un aterciopelado pasamanos.

Así, entre el haz y el envés de un corazón del tilo, surgieron los versos de
